Chairman's Foreword

After a winter of heavy rains and storms I think everyone is looking forward to some more pleasant weather in the summer and what is more uplifting than to come along, take part and enjoy the various activities, workshops and community events which have become an integral part of the Biddulph Festival.

Now in its 17th year the festival continues to flourish with a mixture of old favourites, such as Rock on the Rocks, Biddulph By the Sea, The Family Fun Day, The Town Hall Steps cafe as well as some brand new events with Biddulph Ukulele Groups 'Day of the Uke' event, a charity concert by the up and coming band Pickering White who were recently featured on Radio 1.

There are musical events from Biddulph Up in Arms concerts as well as performances by Biddulph and District Youth Orchestra and Biddulph Male Voice Choir to name but a few. Again it's a case of something for everyone!!

There does go a lot of hard, unseen work to make this festival so varied and once again many thanks to all the organisers who have worked tirelessly to present to you some quality entertainment.

The festival launch has, in recent years, got the festival off to a great start and has grown as more people have become involved.

A special mention to Events Co-ordinator, Veronica Brown, for all her hard work in producing another impressive brochure which surely must help promote Biddulph within the wider community.

On behalf of all the festival organisers I would like to ask you for your support and trust that you will enjoy our festival extravaganza.

epilepsy action

Epilepsy Action is the UK's leading epilepsy organisation and exists to improve the lives of everyone affected by the condition. As a member-led association, we are led by and represent people with epilepsy, their friends, families and healthcare professionals. Epilepsy can affect anyone at any age and from any walk of life, and globally over 50 million people have the condition. Epilepsy Action is here to support people every step of the way through living with the condition.

We exist to improve the lives of everyone affected by epilepsy. To do this we must ensure that all people with epilepsy have specialist health care and treatment for their condition and can lead their lives free of stigma, prejudice and discrimination.

We provide advice and information, online, in print and directly through the Epilepsy Helpline. We also offer e-learning – with tips for living with epilepsy, as well as videos and interactive quizzes. Our UK wide network of groups is growing all the time and gives people a great chance to share experiences and support each other. Our online forum has members around the world, all supporting each other, alongside our Facebook page.
